

FLASHES FROM CAMDEN

 It was the wrong house that George McGuckin, a hobo, entered yesterday when he demanded of Mrs. Charles Humes something to eat. Mrs. Humes is the wife of a policeman, and the latter arrived just in time to catch McGuckin. The Recorder sent him to jail for a month.

 The Coliseum Theatre Company was incorporated yesterday with a capital of $2000, the object being to manage and operate theatres. The incorporators are Fred G. Nixon Nirdlinger, Lewis H. Caban and Charles B. Wannemacher, of Philadelphia.

 Accused of deserting his wife and family, Augustus Stacious, a draughtsman, formerly employed by the New York Shipbuilding Company, was brought back from Norfolk, Va., by Detective Cherry yesterday. He was locked up pending action by the grand jury.

 Many persons of prominence yesterday attended the funeral of Henry Fetters, an old resident of South Camden, which was held from his home at 1210 South Third street. Services were conducted by the local Lodge of Elks and Ionic Lodge of Masons.
